CAML’s primary consideration is price, paying due consideration to speed and likelihood of execution in moving markets. Costs are not a factor as all trades are executed directly with market makers and no commissions are paid. Most of CAML’s trading is executed via Bloomberg’s electronic trading system, and in all cases bids and offers are requested from a number of counterparties (at least three where available, and generally more). If the pricing is acceptable then the best available bid/offer is taken and the trade executed there.	Given the relatively small volumes transacted CAML determines that it will receive a better service from using one Broker. Barclay’s was selected based on its low commission rate, its market coverage and expertise, together with settlement considerations. Orders are transmitted electronically via Bloomberg and are then transacted using Barclay’s proprietary algorithm which balances price and speed characteristics.	Given the relatively small volumes transacted CAML determines that it will receive a better service from using one Broker.
