Conning has a number of internal personnel and compliance policies, procedures, guidelines and standards (collectively, “Policies”) in place that explain the manner in which Conning behaves as an organization and how it expects its employees and suppliers to act. Conning designed and implemented these Policies to ensure that its business is conducted in an ethical and transparent manner and in accordance with all applicable laws and regulatory requirements. The Policies address issues, including, without limitation, relating to:

- Anti-money laundering

Conning's whistleblowing policy encourages employees to report concerns they may have about how colleagues are being treated or practices within Conning's business or supply chain (including concerns regarding compliance with applicable laws and/or breaches of Conning's ethical standards). The whistleblowing policy would also cover any circumstances that may give rise to an enhanced risk of slavery or human trafficking. Conning's whistleblowing policy is designed to make it easy for its employees to make disclosures, without fear of retaliation and permits employees to anonymously report incidents via an anonymous reporting hotline, where legally permissible.

Due diligence and steps taken to assess risk with respect to Employees

Through its selection, recruitment, induction and training procedures and programs, Conning aims to ensure that the people it employs are not subject to modern slavery and human trafficking and are afforded the rights and protections that they are entitled to by law.

Investment Management

Some of Conning's asset management subsidiaries are each a signatory to the Principles for Responsible Investment ("PRI"), a voluntary framework for incorporating environmental, social and governance issues into investment decision-making and ownership practices.

Supply Chains

Conning conducts (a) initial due diligence on its material suppliers using a risk-based approach, and (b) ongoing due diligence, as it deems appropriate, on its suppliers based on the current risk assessment.

Risk Assessment

We believe that Conning faces a low risk of slavery and human trafficking in its supply chains because Conning uses mainly low risk professional suppliers, and Conning does not (a) act as a producer, manufacturer or retailer of any physical goods, (b) have intricate supply chains or (c) obtain material services from external businesses located in high risk countries.

Effectiveness of Anti-Slavery and Human Trafficking Efforts

Conning is committed to periodic review of its supply chain risk management processes and identifying areas which may pose a higher risk of slavery and human trafficking and adopting appropriate governance processes.
